

ABSTRACT

According to one embodiment, a method is disclosed. The method includes measuring gaps between data packets received via a network connection in order to ascertain problems in the connection that are attributable to the network.